A CHINESE PIRATE STORY .- A short time ago a Chinese junk was boarded by eight pirates near Newcharg, says the Shanghai Mercury, and the craw of the junk came frankly forward and told the robbers that there was nothing of any value aboard, as the vessel was in ballast. The pirates being good humored fellows laughed at the fool's errand that they had come on and asked the bostmen could they have a meal at least after their trouble. The boatmen, apparent ly delighted to get off so easily, replied in the affirmative, and uncovered the hatches leading to the hold, whither they fold the pirates to descend before them while the chow was in course of preparation. The pirates, never dreaming of any trick from the harmless looking old boatmen, did as they were told; but they were no sooner between the they have the beatmen fastened down the low than the boatmen fastened down the hatches again and caught them fairly in a trap. Not content with having captured the pirates, or all a fearing to trust such customers, the boatmen straightway florded the hold with the intention of drowning them out like rais. In their alarm the p rates began to fire their guns at one another. In a little time, however, all was quiet in the hold, and the boatmen concluded from the silence that all was over. So they ran their junk inshere and communicated with the board, and when they raised the hatches discovered five of the eight pirates dead and the others in a dying condition. The survivors were handed over to justice and suffered the condition of the law. The hearmen ed the penalty of the law. The bratmen were suitably rewarded for their bravery and presence of mind.

THE FREAK OF A HUMAN HAND -Friday, June 20, Frederic Miller and David Heller, two employees at the furnace at the rolling-mills, were killed by a premature explosion of Hercules powder while blasting out salamender fr to the bottom of the fornace, sa sthe P zil, Ill Times Miller was stending directly over the drilled hole of the time of the explasion and was terribly term and disfigured. Both arms were blown off, but one was found. Every effort to find the other arm proved fruitless until yesterday. The workmen saw an object charging to one of the stay-rods that help to support and keep in position the stacks on the top of the furnace. Through curiosity they olimbed only filled them with horror between a man's hand with early the stub of an arm attached tight, clasping the rod above mentioned. There can be no doubt that the head is that of the unfortunate Miller. The only theory known for the strange freak of the body less hand is that the hand was blown out of the top of the high stack, and in coming down the muscles, still active, contracted when the hand struck the rod and fastened to it with a deadly grip. From the position in which Miller was standing the band could not have reached the position it occupied other than in the above manner. The muscles could not have relaxed much after first contracting else the hand would have fallen. -Chicago Trtbune.
